FOREIGN AND INSULAR.

SMALLPOX ON VESSEL.

Steamship "Bradford"—Vancouver, British Columbia.

The steamship Bradford from ports in Chile, Mexico, and Peru arrived at Vancouver, British Columbia, November 4, 1920, with a case of smallpox on board among the crew. The Bradford left the port of Talara, Peru, approximately 21 days before arrival at Vancouver. The vessel sailed from Vancouver for San Francisco, Calif., arriving November 9, 1920.

AUSTRALIA.

Influenza—Melbourne—1919.

Epidemic influenza of the pneumonic type appeared suddenly at Melbourne, Australia, January 24, 1919. The prevalence of the disease increased rapidly, and for the week ended February 15, 1919, a daily average of 80 cases was reported. A gradual subsidence then occurred, lasting until the week ended March 21, 1919, when the daily average was reported at 18 cases. After that date a rapid increase was noted to the week ended April 26, when the daily average was reported as 106 cases. During May and June a second decline was noted. In July, cases began again to be numerous, and during the week ended July 19 the reported daily average was 82. A rapid decline occurred in August and September, 1919, and in October the disease practically disappeared. On October 17, 1919, notification of cases of influenza was suspended. The total number of cases reported was 8,678, equivalent to an attack rate of 81.73 per 1,000. These figures were stated to be only approximately correct. The deaths numbered 464, equivalent to a rate of 4.37 per 1,000 of the population, which was estimated in 1919 as 106,180. The following table shows the deaths at the various age groups, 273 of the deaths being of males and 191 of females:
